Explain the essential tips to create a secure mobile application and protect from potential issues. The primary objective of this study is to evaluate the safety of a recombinant humanized monoclonal antibody (CR9114) against the CD11c monoclonal antibody in combination with combined chemotherapy and interleukin-2 therapy. CR9114 is a recombinant humanized monoclonal antibody directed against CD11c. CD11c is a monoclonal antibody which has been shown to enhance the toxicity of IL-2 therapy in human tumor cell lines. The CD11c monoclonal antibody can inhibit IL-2-induced lymphokine production, and can redirect other lymphocytes involved in IL-2-induced effects (such as natural killer and cytotoxic cells). CD11c is expressed on a variety of tumor cells including breast, ovarian, prostate, and other carcinomas. CD11c has been shown to be expressed at low levels on B cells and T cells and other normal lymphoid tissues. CR9114 is designed to target CD11c using the human IgG1 backbone and is intended to minimize toxicity in normal tissues. A Phase II clinical trial in non-Hodgkin's lymphoma and melanoma is evaluating the effect of CD11c monoclonal antibody on IL-2 induced cell lysis * Includes publications given by the data provider as well as publications identified by ClinicalTrials.gov Identifier (N 3da54e8ca3
